

Passage to Prosperity Transforming Tribal Lives with Skills

Jyoti S. Verma

Giving a boost to Skill India Mission, the Ministry of Skill Development and Entrepreneurship's Grameen Udyami Project not only promotes skill development and entrepreneurship among tribal youth to make them self-reliant within their respective geographies, but also drives economic prosperity in tribal regions and reverses migration.

An important message from Mahatma Gandhi to India was inspired by his observations of the non-White people of South Africa, where he spent 21 years. His interaction with the Zulu people exposed him to the exploitation of the tribal people by the colonial rulers. Gandhiji had worked with the native communities of Africa and was influenced by their self-reliance. These people were often educated in the mission schools and valued self-help, personal advancement, and the advantages of education.

Several of them even went abroad for higher education.

In India too, Gandhiji took the concept of village Swaraj and Khadi inspired by the self-dependent tribals. Many of his ideas are about the principles of governance, public service and policy making, which can be useful to resolve the challenges faced by the tribal community. He advocated that tribals should be involved in their development and participate in their process of development, wherein the social and cultural aspects should never be undervalued. When there are no avenues for tribals in their local areas, the tribals are forced to migrate from remote villages to districts, towns, and cities in search of food, livelihood, education, and other resources. According to the 2001 census, 29.70% of tribal people migrated from their native places to other cities, temporarily or on a permanent basis.

The limited options available to tribal people in their areas are also confined to agriculture. According to Census 2011, over two-thirds of the tribal population in the country is working in the primary sector (as against 43% of the non-tribal population) and is heavily dependent on agriculture either as cultivators or as agricultural labourers. Unfortunately, there was a shift from being cultivators to agricultural labourers. Between 2001 and 2011 census reports the number of tribal cultivators reduced by 10% while the number of agricultural labourers increased by 9%. Often engaging in manual labour in an informal economy in over-crowded cities without formal guarantees and social protection merely shifts rural poverty to an urban setting, adding to the woes.

A solution to all the said problems was piloted in May this year when the Ministry of Skill Development and Entrepreneurship (MSDE) launched the Grameen Udyami Project (Rural Tribal Technical Training Programme). The programme aims at multiskilling tribal youth and imparting functional skills to them for enabling livelihoods. The long-term objective of the programme is to augment the inclusive and sustainable growth of tribal communities and drive economic prosperity in tribal regions.

Indian Studies Courses Offered at Universities in the US

M J Warsi

India is becoming an increasingly important region to study in the modern, global world because of its importance in the world economy. Domestic businesses have been partnering with call centers, manufacturers and industries in India to bring in profits. Companies of world repute often travel to India for business. Knowledge of the regions cultural practices as well as practical language skills are incredibly useful in today's world, especially for students. It not only makes students more culturally aware in today's global world, but allows for career advancement as well. Every school that does not have a great Indian Studies program should highly consider creating one out of their existing structures.

Harvard University is the oldest university in the United States and has the largest endowment in the country. The university has the Department of Sanskrit and Indian Studies within the History Department. Harvard can proudly claim that it has had a South Asian department dating back to 1872, when a professor taught courses in Sanskrit as Latin electives. Since then, the course offerings have only grown. The program now offers Hindi-Urdu, as well as Sanskrit. Tamil is another Language dealt in this department. While mostly a graduate program for Ph.Ds, the department also has undergraduates and graduate students (for a Masters). Obviously Indian Studies has been an integral part to Harvard; otherwise they would not have kept the program for over 100 years. As the leading school in United States, it is important to note that they have a small, but continually growing Indian Studies program.

Princeton University, the second school in United States, has a vastly different history. Their Program in South Asian Studies is an affiliate with the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies and was started in 2007. Furthermore, students receive a certificate of proficiency in the program, as a part of their regular program in International and Regional Studies. The only language Princeton offers is Hindi. Princeton University's South Asian program is definitely small and still growing. However, it must be kept in mind that the

Green Energy The Way Forward

Dr. Manas Ranjan Senapati

Renewable energy or green energy is energy obtained from the sources which are essentially consumed from nature and are not replenished during the course of time. Examples of renewable resources include wind energy, solar energy, geothermal energy, tidal energy, biofuel and hydroelectric energy. The most important feature of renewable energy is that it can be harnessed without the release of harmful toxic pollutants. Non-renewable energy or conventional fossil fuels such as coal, oil and gas, are likely to deplete in due course. At the present rate of consumption, oil reserves will last for 30 to 40 years, gas reserves will last for 50 to 60 years, coal reserves will last for 80 to 100 years and uranium reserves will last for 1000 years. Conservation of non-renewable energy is therefore important not only to save the resources but also to protect our environment. National Energy Conservation

Day observed every year on 14th December aims to generate awareness among the masses in India about the importance of saving energy.

Green energy is derived from natural sources such as sunlight, wind, rain, tides, plants, algae and geo-thermal heat. These energy resources are environment friendly and reduce our carbon footprint. Green energy, however, utilises energy sources that are readily available all over the world, including in rural and remote areas that don't otherwise have access to electricity. Advances in renewable energy technologies have lowered the cost of solar panels, wind turbines and other sources of green energy, placing the ability to produce electricity in the hands of the people rather than those of oil, gas, coal and utility companies. About 30 percent of the world's electricity comes from renewables, including hydropower, solar and wind among others. Costa Rica has produced a whopping 98% of its electricity from renewable sources for over seven years in a row from combination of hydro, geothermal, wind, biomass and solar power. India ranks fourth in the world in terms of installed renewable energy capacity and India's non-fossil fuel energy has grown by over 25% in the previous 7 years.

National Energy Conservation Day

It is estimated that by the year 2050, the largest amount of the world's energy will be supplied by alternative or renewable energy sources. Regardless, a world powered by renewable sources sounds like a great future. Green technologies encompass various aspects of technology which help us reduce the human impact on the environment and create ways of sustainable development. Today the environment is racing towards the tipping point at which we would have done permanent irreversible damage to the planet earth. Our current actions are pulling the world towards an ecological landslide which if happens would make destruction simply inevitable. Green technologies are an emerging approach towards saving earth. Thus both its pros and cons need to be investigated. Green technology uses renewable natural resources that never depletes. Green technology adopts new and innovative energy generation techniques. Renewable energy is the energy which is derived from a limitless source. Proper utilisation of energy resources is a hot debate going on these days. It is very essential to choose which source of energy for our need and why so. Majority of factors such as cleanliness, cost, stability, efficiency and environmental aspects must be taken into account. It is a bitter fact that many industries and commercial establishments around the world instead of going green are still dependent on fossil fuels for electricity generation.

Need of Renewable Energy

With an increase in the world's population of 50-100% in the future and increased economic welfare by many people in the industrialised countries and the newly developed industrialised countries including rurbanisation, the challenges for future economic, social and technological changes are clear. There is a need for more resource efficient consumption patterns, more resource efficient technologies and an increased focus on reduction of environmental impact and resource consumption in strategies for research, innovation and different consumption areas.

Renewable energy uses energy sources that are continually replenished by nature-the sun, the wind, water, the Earth's heat, and plants. Renewable energy technologies turn these fuels into usable forms of energy-most often electricity, but also heat, chemicals, or mechanical power. Renewable energy generation, such as wind and solar power, is sometimes criticised for being variable or intermittent.

Renewable energy technologies can have significant environmental benefits. Unlike coal and natural gas, they can generate electricity and fuels without releasing significant quantities of CO2 and other greenhouse gases that contribute to climate change. We often call renewable energy technologies "clean" and "green" because they produce comparatively less pollutants. Burning fossil fuels, however releases greenhouse gases into the atmosphere, trapping the sun's heat and contributing to global warming. Climate scientists generally agree that the Earth's average temperature has increased alarmingly in the past century. If this trend continues, sea levels will rise, and scientists predict that floods, heat waves, droughts, and other extreme weather conditions could affect us more often.

Other pollutants are also released into the air, soil, and water when fossil fuels are burned. These pollutants take a dramatic toll on the environment-and on humans. Air pollution contributes to diseases like asthma, pneumonia, lung cancer etc. Acid rain caused by sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides mostly released from thermal power plants affects plants and aquatic animals. Nitrogen oxides also contribute to photochemical smog. Renewable energy will also help us develop energy independence and security. Replacing some of our petroleum with fuels made from vegetable oil, for example, bio-fuel could not only save money but also strengthen our energy security. Renewable energy is available in plenty, and the technologies are improving all the time. There are many ways to explore renewable energy resources. Most of us are seen already in practice to use renewable energy in our daily lives.

Energy Conservation

Proper use of energy is very vital in catering the need for energy demand. Experts all over the world are of the opinion to utilise renewable energy sources for power generation. The sustainable nature of wind, hydropower, geothermal, solar and biomass highly encourage the energy supply companies to utilise them. Moreover, people can setup small solar panels over their homes to tackle their own load demands. Conservation of energy and utilising renewable sources is the ultimate destination of energy roadmap. Many vehicles run on gasoline (which is a fossil fuel). Gasoline will deplete one day and vehicle industry must resort to some new sort of energy such as hybrid systems or electric vehicles to continue its business. Energy can be conserved in many ways. Many a times, we ignore the lights, fans and other devices being switched on. Turning off lights, ACs and heater when not in use can save up to 282 kilowatts of energy per day. This practice will certainly save lots of money on electricity bill. Incandescent lamps are now almost replaced with light-emitting diode (LED) bulbs. It only takes a 12-watt LED bulb to give off as much light as a 43-watt halogen bulb or a 60-watt traditional incandescent bulb. It's a simple way to use less electricity. This practice not only saves money but also conserves energy. Air conditioning and heating are responsible for a large percentage of electricity bills in various establishments. We can adjust the thermostat of air conditioner and heater by a few degrees, but while still maintaining soothe. As a case study, if the heater is typically set to 71 degree Fahrenheit in the peak winter, set it to, for

Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi's Mann Ki Baat

27th November 2022

India's G20 Presidency

The G20 is a partnership comprising two-thirds of the world's population, three-fourths of world trade, and 85% of world GDP. It is a great opportunity for India to preside over such a big group, such a powerful group. This becomes even more special because India was awarded this responsibility during Azadi Ka Amrit Kaal. We have to make full use of this opportunity and focus on global good, world welfare. Whether it is peace or unity, sensitivity towards the environment, or sustainable development, India has solutions to challenges. The theme that we have given to India's G20 Presidency - 'One Earth, One Family, One Future'- shows our commitment to Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam - that is, there should be welfare of all, peace to all, fulfilment to all and well-being for all.

G20 - an Opportunity to Showcase India's Pride

In the coming days, many programs related to G20 will be organised in different parts of the country. During this period, people from different parts of the world will get a chance to visit your states. I am sure that you will bring the diverse and distinctive colors of your culture to the world. You also have to remember that the people coming to the G20, even if they come now as delegates, are tourists of the future. I would also urge schools, colleges and universities to create opportunities for discussions, debates and competitions related to G20 in their respective places. If you go to the www.G20.in website, you will find many things there according to your interest.

India's Strides in Space Sector

On the 18th of November, the whole country witnessed history being made in the space sector with the launch of 'Vikram-S' - the first such rocket, which was designed and developed by the private sector of India. Vikram-S is equipped with many features and is lighter and cheaper than other rockets. Its development cost is much less than the cost incurred by other countries involved in space missions. In space technology, world class standard at a low cost, has now become the hallmark of India.

You will be surprised to know that some crucial parts of this rocket have been made through 3D Printing. This marks the dawn of a new era for the private space sector in India and the beginning of a new era full of self-confidence for the country. India is sharing its success in the space sector with its neighbouring countries as well. India recently launched a satellite jointly developed with Bhutan. This satellite will help Bhutan in the management of its natural resources. The launching of this satellite is also a reflection of the strong Indo-Bhutan relations.

Drones Delivering Apples

A few days ago we saw how apples were transported through drones in Kinnaur, a remote district of Himachal where there is heavy snowfall in this season. During snowfall, Kinnaur's connectivity, especially transportation of goods, with the rest of the state becomes very difficult for weeks. Now with the help of Drone technology, delicious Kinnauri apples of Himachal will start reaching people more quickly. This will reduce the expenditure of our farmer brothers and sisters. As apples will reach the market on time, there will be less wastage. Our countrymen are making things possible with their innovations, which could not even be imagined earlier. In recent years, our country has undertaken a long journey of achievements. I have full faith that we Indians and especially our young generation are not going to stop now.

Indian Music Making a Mark

You will be pleased to know that in the last 8 years, the export of musical instruments from India has increased three and a half times. Talking about electrical musical instruments; their export has increased by 60 times. This shows that the craze for Indian culture and music is increasing all over the world. The biggest buyers of Indian musical instruments are developed countries like the USA, Germany, France, Japan and the UK. It is a matter of fortune for all of us that our country has such a rich heritage of music, dance and art. Our forms of music have not only enriched our culture, but have also left an indelible mark on the music of the world. The fame of Indian music has spread to every corner of the world.

Preserving Tribal Culture; Promoting Sustainable Living

The lifestyle of the Naga community in Nagaland; their art-culture and music; is an important part of the glorious heritage of our country. The life of the people of Nagaland and their skills are also very important for a sustainable life style. In order to save these traditions and skills and pass them on to the next generation, the people there have formed an organisation -'Lidi-Cro-U'. 'The organisation has undertaken the work of reviving beautiful facets of Naga culture which were on the verge of being lost. For example, this organisation has started the work of launching Naga music albums. They also organise workshops related to folk music and folk dance, traditional Nagaland style of apparel making, tailoring and weaving, and making bamboo products. With this, these youth not only get connected with their culture, but also create new employment opportunities.

Friends, there will be such cultural styles and traditions in your region too. You too can make such efforts in your respective areas.

Kindling the Flame of Education

In Bansa, a village in Hardoi, 70-80 kilometres away from Lucknow, Jatin Lalit Singh ji is engaged in kindling the flame of education by establishing a 'Community Library and Resource Centre' two years ago. The centre has more than 3000 books related to Hindi and English literature, computer, law and materials that can be useful in preparing for many government exams. Small children also come here to learn new things while playing. Be it offline or online education, about 40 volunteers are busy guiding the students at this center. Similarly, Sanjay Kashyap ji of Jharkhand is also giving new wings to the dreams of poor children. He is known as the 'Library Man' for children in many districts of Jharkhand. When Sanjay ji had started working, he had got the first library built at his native place. Wherever he was transferred during his job, he would get involved in the mission of opening a library for the education of poor and tribal children. His mission to open a library is taking the form of a social movement today.

Manav Mandir - an Epitome of Human Service

The world of medical science has made a lot of progress with the help of research and innovation as well as state-of-the-art technology and equipment, but some diseases, even today, remain a big challenge for us. One such disease is - Muscular Dystrophy! It is mainly a genetic disease that can occur at any age, in which the muscles of the body begin to weaken. The treatment and care of such patients require great sense of service. We have such a centre at Solan in Himachal Pradesh, which has become a new ray of hope for the patients of Muscular Dystrophy. The name of this centre is 'Manav Mandir' and is run by the Indian Association of Muscular Dystrophy. Along with Physiotherapy, Electrotherapy, and Hydrotherapy, diseases are also treated here with the help of Yoga-Pranayama.

The centre also organises awareness camps for patients not only in Himachal Pradesh but across the country. The most encouraging thing is that the management of this organisation is mainly done by people suffering from this disease. Efforts are also on to develop Manav Mandir as a hospital and research centre.

Passage to Prosperity : Transforming ...

A unique multi-skilling project

A National Skill Development Corporation (NSDC) funded initiative, Grameen Udyami seeks to give a boost to the Skill India Mission and strengthen sustainable livelihood for tribal populations. It is currently being implemented in six states of Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh, Madhya Pradesh, Jharkhand and Gujarat. The pilot project, under the Sansadiya Sankul Pariyojana, was launched on 13th May 2022 for training approximately 250 beneficiaries of 17 clusters of 17 districts selected from six states of Madhya Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Gujarat, Rajasthan, Maharashtra and Odisha.

In the first phase of training, candidates were mobilised from rural and tribal areas of Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh, Madhya Pradesh and Gujarat. Transportation, boarding and lodging were provided to the candidates so that they do not miss out the learning opportunity due to lack of resources. Training of 157 candidates started in seven batches in Bhopal, Madhya Pradesh, in May 2022, and about 133 candidates completed the training on 27th June, 2022.

The second phase of the pilot project was launched in Ranchi in August 2022 to train 450 tribal students in Madhya Pradesh and Jharkhand. It is being implemented by Yuva Vikas Society, through Seva Bharti Kendra. NSDC under the aegis of MSDE has supported in setting up of laboratories and classrooms through Sector Skill Councils in Seva Bharti Kendra Skill Development Centre.

Under the programme, skill training was provided in five disciplines of electrical and solar energy, agricultural mechanization, e-governance, plumbing and masonry, two-wheeler repair and maintenance. In October 2022, the MSDE felicitated 165 students at a ceremony under the second phase of Grameen Udyami project.

Unexplored opportunities

There is a massive economic opportunity for India in building a skilled and trained manpower to exploit its demographic dividend. An important component of this opportunity is rural youth, who make about 68 percent of India's total population. This population does not have access to vocational training. In the absence of skills, most of the literate rural youth end up working as unskilled migrant workers in the nearest towns and cities turning away from local farming, which is considered unprofitable and way too arduous.

The new programme, Grameen Udyami aims at making a change. Backed by an allocation of Rs. 85,000 crore from the Centre exclusively for tribal areas, the mission intends to raise residents' ownership and awareness about such schemes and initiatives. It lays down the right avenues for tribal youth to use their talent in the right places. The project is believed to be a game-changer not only for the tribal communities, but also for India's villages, towns and districts' self-reliance. Providing quality education to tribal communities can open their growth prospects, and lead to inclusivity, financial growth of tribal areas, and provide economic empowerment to the residing populations.

Empowering tribal communities solves many other social problems as well, the foremost being migration and over-dependence on agriculture. The onset of COVID-19 brought the issue of 'migrant workers' into public focus, highlighting the need for a new approach to build livelihood opportunities in the rural areas, from where these workers consistently hail from. The over-dependence on agriculture, which employs over 60 percent of India's total population, has made the situation worse. Lack of jobs, unprofitable occupation and the poverty that follows, can all be solved with skill training. Skilling helps the community diversify and de-risk their income streams by taking other vocations and adding high-profit verticals, such as horticulture, aquaculture and poultry, to their existing occupations like agriculture.

Led by tribal welfare

Grameen Udyami Yojana is implemented under Sansadiya Parisankul Yojana. Under the programme, 49 Scheduled Tribe (ST) clusters in 15 states of India have been selected by 40 tribal Members of Parliament (MPs). The scheme is being implemented in respective clusters. One development associate is appointed by the MPs in each cluster.

An important objective of the programme is to create new opportunities for employment or self-employment and entrepreneurship locally, so that tribal youth can start their own businesses, generating more livelihood opportunities for themselves as well as for others. For this purpose, each district magistrate and collector has been asked to draw up a Skill Development Plan for their district keeping in mind the resources available and the local aspirations.

With skills, organised sectors too will see better participation of tribal populations, which is not the case right now. These sectors have a low contribution in tribal livelihood as compared to the national average.

During the first leg of Gramin Udyami, 152 candidates were enrolled, of which 132 successfully completed the course and were given certificates. The second leg was held in Madhya Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand and Odisha, where 165 candidates were given the certificates. The next phase is focused on women's groups, and will begin in Gumla, Jharkhand, for which 153 women have already enrolled.

Interestingly, women make up a substantial percentage of the population making the rural-to-urban shift. According to the 2011 census, of the 78 million rural migrants, 55 percent were females. They outnumbered males in 554 of the 640 districts due to marriage or other reasons. It is believed that capacity-building and skill training of women, mainly through the self-help group movement, can lead to many women entrepreneurs and income generation opportunities. Their empowerment can lead to better living standards for their families and eventually to their communities.

Part of a big mission

The Government has adopted a multi-pronged strategy for the overall development of tribal youth living across the country. Skill training is an important component of this strategy. The Ministry of Skill Development and Entrepreneurship has been implementing Pradhan Mantri Kaushal Vikas Yojana (PMKVY), Jan Shikshan Sansthan (JSS) Scheme and National Apprenticeship Promotion Scheme (NAPS) for providing short-term Skill Development training and Craftsman Training Scheme (CTS) through Industrial Training Institutes (ITIs) for long-term training. The schemes are for all sections of youth, including tribal communities.

The Ministry of Tribal Affairs (MoTA), the nodal Ministry for overall policy, planning and coordination of programmes for development of the Scheduled Tribes (STs) all over the country, also provides funding support under the Scheme of Special Central Assistance to Tribal Sub-Scheme (SCA to TSS) for vocational training in tribal areas. This scheme aims at upgrading the skills of the tribal youth in various traditional or modern vocations depending on their educational qualification, present economic trends, and the market potential to enable them to gain sustainable employment or become self-dependent.

As the schemes of the MSDE are demand-driven, the targets are often not set. However, all the said schemes have the mandatory provision of utilisation of funds for tribals through Scheduled Tribe component. All the schemes are ongoing and are delivering skills across the country.

Skilled at home, for the world

Skilling has become more important in the Post COVID - New World Order, where the mantra to stay relevant in the competing market is to reskill and upskill for anyone, anywhere. The COVID-19 pandemic has led to disruptions in traditional supply chains of electronics and digital products across the world, with countries looking for a trusted partner to support these chains. "As the world now looks towards India, we need to skill our youth to emerge as a Global Skills Hub," said Minister of State for Skill Development and Entrepreneurship, Rajeev Chandrasekhar while speaking at the session License to Skill at the India Global Forum UAE in Dubai last year.

The Minister shared that skilling is a network that is extraordinarily built across India. The country has 14,000 Industrial Training Institutes (ITIs), almost 10,000 to 12,000 training centres and 700 Pradhan Mantri Kaushal Kendras (PMKKs). Between 2015 and 2020, India has skilled over 3.4 crore people of which almost 1.4 crore were completely free skilling provided by the government using the same network. More than 4,000 programmes are being offered to the youth through this network.

"One of the things you will see India doing very significantly in the coming months and years is to take skills on a digital platform and in multiple languages, extending its reach into areas where we did not have a physical centre," the Union Minister added.

The MSDE has built up an extensive network of ITIs, JSSs, PMKKs, PMKVY, apprenticeships and is transforming the lives of youth through more than 4,500 skilling programmes being offered by it. Extensive training with multiple skills will be extended to 50,000 to one lakh students in 50 tribal districts in the coming years, the Minister said in another official statement.

In addition to Grameen Udyami, the Government of India is also pushing its other initiatives for skill development such as Pre-Departure Orientation Training, Higher Education and School Initiative, India's International Skill Centres (IISCs), Capacity Building Scheme, PMKKs, Rojgar Mela and PMKVY. At the virtual Global Skills Summit organised recently, the Centre shared its plans to formulate a policy to make India the skill supply hub for global value chains. The summit deliberated on skill harmonisation and benchmarking of qualifications, quality standardisation, capacity building, knowledge exchange to promote global mobility, employability, and readiness for the youth to join the global workforce. The demographic dividend has given India a competitive advantage, as almost 54% of India's population is above 25 years, presenting a good opportunity to provide overseas employment opportunities to the Indian youth in countries facing acute and ever-growing shortage of workforce. The MSDE said that the mapping of global skill-set requirements will be undertaken to identify the skilled man-power needs of various nations for global skill mobility. The initiative will help in providing employment opportunities to the youth of India in the coming years.

program only started a mere four years ago and probably needs time to expand.

Yale University has the South Asia Studies Council as a part of the MacMillan Center (of International Studies). Yale had a Sanskrit professor dating back to the early 1900s, but the South Asia Studies Council began in 1990. Undergraduates can participate in the program only as a second major, as an addition to a discipline-based first major. The program offers Hindi, Tamil and Sanskrit as the language options at Yale and has 25 non-language course offerings grounded in South Asia. The program is widely interdisciplinary like most other schools.

Columbia University has the South Asia Institute (SAI). The institute covers South Asia as well as adjacent areas, such as Afghanistan, Tibet and Burma. The SAI offers a Masters of Arts Program in South Asian Studies that uses faculty from fourteen different departments. Undergraduates, however, may only take classes about South Asia without receiving a major, minor or certificate. Columbia offers a wide range of languages including Hindi, Urdu, Bengali, Persian, Punjabi, Sanskrit, Tamil and Tibetan. Columbia's program definitely has room to grow, especially by offering a major or minor for undergraduates. However, it has a strong base (especially with the number of languages offered) for a certification or bachelors of arts program. Stanford University has the Center for South Asia. However, the center does not offer undergraduates majors, minors or certificates in South Asian studies. The center coordinates South Asian events on campus and also provides courses under many different disciplines. The center provides classes in both Hindi and Sanskrit. The history of the center is hard to uncover, but it seems to be a relatively new program.

University of Chicago, on the other hand, is renowned for its South Asian program. It has two different but affiliated groups: the Committee on Southern Asian Studies (COSAS) and the South Asia Language and Area Studies (SALAC). COSAS is supported through the University's endowment while the U.S. government funds SALAC. The Department of South Asian Languages and Civilizations was founded in 1965 for the students. Undergraduates can undergo major or minor courses in South Asia Languages and Civilizations. Graduate students can pursue South Asian studies through three different schools: Humanities, Social Sciences or Divinity. The Department of South Asian Languages and Cultures provides language courses in Bangla, Hindi, Malayalam, Marathi, Tamil, Telugu, Tibetan, Pali, Sanskrit and Urdu. The University of Chicago has an amazing South Asian studies program for both graduate and undergraduates. It also has great resources including a vast library and research-based committees.

The University of Pennsylvania has a historic and well-rounded South Asia Studies Department. Sanskrit was studied at Pennsylvania as early as the 1890s, but it was in the 1930s that the South Asian studies department really took off. Under the leadership of William Norman Brown, the program began to offer more than just the study of Sanskrit. At the University of Pennsylvania, an undergraduate can undergo major or minor courses in South Asian Studies. On the graduate level, Pennsylvania offers both a Master of Arts Program and Doctor of Philosophy program. The department also offers many South Asian languages including Sanskrit, Hindi, Urdu, Bangla, Tamil, Kannada, Telugu, Panjabi, Malayalam, Marathi and Gujarati. Students also procure a language certificate in Bangla, Gujarati, Hindi, Sanskrit, Tamil or Urdu. The University of Pennsylvania's program is very well established.

Duke University's program is very different because it is an inter-collegiate program with Duke, North Carolina State University, and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The North Carolina Consortium for South Asia Studies (NCCSAS) promotes South Asian studies amongst undergraduate and graduate students. However, it does not seem like a student can pursue a specific degree through this program.

Dartmouth College does not have a specific South Asian Studies department. Instead, it has an Asian and Middle Eastern Studies department with a South and Southeast Asia concentration. Undergraduate students have to take classes in a variety of South/Southeast Asia courses in anthropology, religion, language and politics. While there is a course about Hindi-Urdu in a cultural sense, there are no language courses. Northwestern University has a very similar program called the Asian & Middle East Studies Program. There is not a specific South Asian Studies department or program. Northwestern offers Hindi as a language, but it is the only South Asian language offered. Both schools could definitely expand their South Asian Studies departments.

Johns Hopkins University has a great program for graduate students but seems to be lacking for undergraduate students. Graduate students in the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) have a program in South Asian Studies. The program offers a Masters in Arts in South Asia Studies. This program offers Hindi-Urdu and requires a certificate of proficiency in the language. Further, the program accepts Ph.D. students. However, Johns Hopkins should really expand their graduate program to an undergraduate level.

Washington University in St. Louis has a small but growing Indian Studies group. The university offers a minor in South Asian Language and Culture through the Department of Jewish, Islamic and Near Eastern Language and Cultures department. The University also offers Hindi as a language. This university is definitely unique in the sense that it has a minor but not a major, but may be one day the program will expand.

Brown University provides a concentration in South Asian Studies. The concentration requires 12 courses in South Asia and a language proficiency in either Hindi/Urdu or Sanskrit. The history of the department is unavailable, but it seems to be an established program. Rice University has the Chao Center for Asian Studies. The center offers a Bachelor of Arts and Masters in Arts in Asian Studies, but no specific department or major focusing on South Asia. The languages offered from South Asia consist only of Hindi.

Vanderbilt University has an Asian Studies Program. The program offers a major and minor in Asian Studies, but nothing is South Asian specific. No South Asian classes are offered either. The University of Notre Dame is very similar and has the Center for Asian Studies. The center offers a supplementary major in Asian Studies and a minor in Asian studies. Nothing is offered specifically for South Asian studies. No South Asian languages courses offered within the center. Both Vanderbilt University and the University of Notre Dame have a lot of room to grow in regards to their Asian Studies departments.

Emory University has a Middle Eastern and South Asian Studies department. The department combined South Asian Studies with Middle Eastern Studies in 2001. Within that department, undergraduates can undergo major courses in Middle Eastern and South Asian Studies with a track in South Asia. This is a Humanities degree from Emory. The department offers Hindi and Sanskrit. That concludes the review of the top 20 schools according to U.S News rankings. Other schools that have great South Asia Studies programs include the University of Texas and University of California, Berkeley. The University of Texas has an Asian Studies Undergraduate program with a specialisation in South Asia. The program also offers Hindi/Urdu, Malayalam, Sanskrit and Tamil. Furthermore, there is the South Asia Institute that offers support for the major. The University of California, Berkeley has a department called the South & Southeast Asian Studies department. It offers a major for undergraduates that can focus on South Asia. Berkeley boasts a large number of language courses such as Sanskrit, Hindi, Tamil, Urdu, Punjabi, Bangla and Telugu. Berkeley also offers graduate programs such as a Joint M.A./Ph.D. program and an M.A. program.

As you can see, most of the nation's top schools have at least Indian Studies classes, if not whole departments. Schools such as Harvard, University of Chicago, Columbia University, University of Pennsylvania and the University of California, Berkeley have outstanding programs in South Asia Studies. Other universities have adequate programs or are greatly lacking in their South Asia Studies programs. Those schools that are lacking in a specific Indian Studies department should really consider the benefits of having a department. Schools such as Harvard and Princeton have seen the benefits of learning Sanskrit for over 100 years. Thus we can say that the linguistic intricacies of the culture and the literature that it unlocks are amazing and would be an interesting area to explore.

Green Energy: The Way Forward

instance, 69 and if the air conditioner is at 73 in the peak summer, set it to, for instance, 75. Just a couple of degrees can make a considerable indentation in the amount of energy consumed while this also saves money.

Conclusion

India is committed towards clean and green energy sources and National Hydrogen Mission is a leap in that direction, said Union Minister for Environment Forest and Climate change Bhupender Yadav on the sidelines of COP 27 recently concluded in Sharm El-Sheikh, Egypt.

The objective of using green energy sources is to reduce the pessimistic environmental effects associated with non renewable energy sources such as coal, oil and natural gas. Opting to use a renewable energy source will not only translate into cost savings over the long-term, but will also help protect the environment from the risks of fossil fuel emissions. Energy conservation awareness campaigns must be initiated at government level to make people aware of the importance of conserving energy by adopting energy audit. Moreover, power generating units should gradually resort to the use of renewable resources as they are profuse and will never deplete. Social media can play a key role by augmenting awareness amongst people about green energy sources and their utilization. Public should be made aware about green good deeds on energy conservation and utilisation. There is no hesitation in saying that people are becoming increasingly conscious of the importance of using renewable sources of energy but still a lot of work needs to be done in this domain. For instance, awareness programs must be started in various regions by intellectuals and subject experts to make people responsive of the importance of alternative energy technologies. They must also discourage them to use fossil fuels due to their evident demerits to the environment and living beings. Courses on renewable or green energy are introduced in the syllabus at school, college and university levels in order to make them realise their significance and to increase their knowledge in this sphere. Green jobs from different sectors on clean and green energy vs. fossil fuels, public transportation vs. roads, electric vehicles vs. internal combustion engine vehicles, and nature-based solutions vs. oil and gas production draws attention now a days. A renewable energy economy is desired and the next decade is going to be the era of renewable energy. Private sector support and international cooperation are needed to strengthen government policy initiatives. This requires programs that promote technology transfer, capacity building and collaborative research and development. Innovation in green energy sources will enable developing countries to leapfrog to modern and sustainable energy systems and technologies.

Question: The India International Film Festival is held every year in Goa. It is one of the most significant film festivals globally. According to you, what purpose do film festivals serve in the 21st century?

RONITH R NAIK

BANGALORE

Film festivals are significant in the 21st century because they provide a platform for independent cinema and new talent to be seen by the public. This is an opportunity for filmmakers to get their work seen by a large audience. Film festivals are a great way to get people interested in different films and create a sense of community. The films are screened in front of a jury, who then award prizes to the most impressive films. Film festivals also provide an opportunity for filmmakers to network with other filmmakers, as well as distributors and producers. Film festivals are an invaluable part of our culture. They showcase the best in cinema and help to educate audiences about what is happening in the world of film. Films that have got into the India international film festival are usually able to sustain themselves because they have had to go through the self-marketing process of festivals. Even if a film isn't nominated for an award, a festival allows filmmakers to get their work in front of people who can help them make connections and find funding. Public screenings of completed films give audiences and film critics a chance to see what is happening in the world of cinema. They also provide a space for people who love film to come together and share their passion.

RBI Launches First Pilot Project for Retail Digital Rupee

Reserve Bank of India (RBI) launched the first pilot project for the retail digital Rupee 1st December, 2022. As stated by the central bank, eight banks have been identified for phase-wise participation in this pilot project. The first phase will begin with four banks including State Bank of India, ICICI Bank, Yes Bank, and IDFC First Bank in four cities (Mumbai, New Delhi, Bengaluru and Bhubaneswar) across the country. Four more banks, including Bank of Baroda, Union Bank of India, HDFC Bank and Kotak Mahindra Bank will join this pilot project subsequently. The digital Rupee would be in the form of a digital token that represents legal tender. Users will be able to transact with digital Rupee through a digital wallet offered by the participating banks and stored on mobile phones. Transactions can be both Person to Person and Person to Merchant. Payments to merchants can be made using QR codes displayed at merchant locations. The digital Rupee would offer features of physical cash like trust, safety and settlement finality. As in the case of cash, it will not earn any interest and can be converted to other forms of money, like deposits with banks. The pilot project will test the robustness of the entire process of digital rupee creation, distribution and retail usage in real time. Different features and applications of the digital Rupee token and architecture will be tested in future pilot projects, based on the learnings from this pilot project.
