Addressing the Intensifying Impacts of Climate Change

Avinash Mishra
Madhubanti Dutta

We have been discussing the effects of climate change for almost a decade now, which is currently perceived as the biggest threat to humanity. According to the World Health Organization's (WHO) assessment of climate change, environmental problems have a wide range of impact on people's lives and health. In terms of geographical and socio-economic vulnerabilities, the IPCC (Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change) report and domestic reports on the Climate Vulnerability Index (CVI) both identify India as one of the world's hotspots. Climate change worldwide is a serious issue. Increased emissions of heat-trapping greenhouse gases are altering the Earth's climate, and these changes are having a significant impact on the environment. For example, glaciers and ice sheets are melting faster, lake and river ice is breaking up earlier, plant and animal ranges are shifting, and flowers and leaves are budding earlier. Regardless of whether the world decarbonises rapidly, existing trends in emissions and atmospheric greenhouse gases would make some extremely serious climate impacts inevitable through 2040.

The IPCC estimates that in the next decade alone, climate change will drive 32-132 million more people into extreme poverty. Food security will be compromised by global warming, which will also make heat-related deaths, heart disease, and mental health problems increasingly prominent. The effects of climate change that have begun to manifest in India have received considerable attention this summer. With temperatures in the capital city exceeding 49 degrees Celsius, the soaring heat has surpassed records. The likelihood of heat waves has increased, making a substantial portion of India's population vulnerable. According to the most recent Sixth Assessment Report, Working Group II of the IPCC, failure to take prompt action to prevent or adapt to climate change might have disastrous effects, especially in India. Sea ice loss, rapid sea level rise, and longer, more intense heat waves are just a few of the consequences of global climate change that scientists have long anticipated.

India is one of the world's most climate-vulnerable nations. India must therefore map out all the sensitive areas, industries, and population groupings at the district level. India's topography and geography are diverse enough to call for various approaches depending on the location. Planning and implementation are simply the foundation of an effective framework for climate action. To maintain these efforts, it is essential to set up a periodic monitoring mechanism to assess the progress and a frequent update on new scientific resources and parameters by a research and knowledge committee. India has already begun to experience the effects of climate change, including glacial retreat in the Hindu Kush Himalayas, sea-level rise, and the combined effects of powerful tropical cyclones that cause flooding, an erratic rainfall pattern,

Polish Your Personality for Virtual Interviews

Sangeeta Gadhok Magan

Over the last few years, probably every sector, working style, work culture, and workplaces have witnessed a sea change. Where work from home is happening seamlessly; even the interview processes have shifted online.

According to industry and hiring experts, virtual interviews are here to stay; they are the new norm. However, for you to ace it, you need to set a lot of things in place at your home as well.

In the earlier article, I have shared few important tips on how to prepare well and sail through the interview process, rather than say the saddest words of anyone's life- 'I wish I had!' Because if you prepare well, there is nothing to fear. So, let us briefly recall and summarize some important points that have been discussed in that article. We have broadly talked about all aspects that matter, be it your grooming, the background, the light in the room, your non-verbal language, and of course the technology; all are crucial. You have to make the best possible first impression.

In simple words you cannot fail to make an impression because of poor interviewing skills. Candidates who showcase a strong virtual presence, display confidence, and are able to communicate clearly and build a natural rapport with the panellists, prove to be much more successful.

Now that you have understood the vital aspects of the virtual interviews, in the part, I am going to discuss about Group Discussion and Personal Interview tips.

Always remember, that your preparation is the only key word to your success at the interview and this means incorporating the vital knowledge, the right attitude, correct body language and the precise approach. Let the 4 C's - Content, Communication skills,

Confidence and Composure be your weapons to ace the GD and the PI.

For better or worse, virtual interviews and remote hiring are here to stay. While there are many unsurpassed advantages to this, there are many challenges as well. The process may be relatively new, however, you need to do your bit to ace the nuances of a virtual interview and nail it. So let us move ahead to understand a virtual Group Discussion [GD] and Personal Interview [PI].

The Group Discussion, commonly referred to as GD, is a crucial and mass elimination round in an interview process. And because this is virtual, challenges are more. Regardless of whether you are wishing to get into a top-notch college or applying for a job, the group

Naturopathy: Healing Diseases from the Root

Suvidha Kumra

Naturopathy is one of the important systems of traditional medicine in India. Naturopathy means keeping the body healthy by living in synchrony with the nature. In today's busy lifestyle, people are suffering from many types of diseases. Through Naturopathy, the body can be kept healthy by following a disciplined routine. In fact, Naturopathy is the holistic route to human wellness.

Naturopathy is a distinct primary health care system that stresses upon the body's self-healing mechanism. It uses a wide range of therapies to support human wellness. The tenets of Naturopathy are based on the usefulness of exercise, sunlight, freshwater, stress management, healthy diet, and so on. Naturopathy strongly advocates the importance of health, minimizing symptoms of illness, balancing the entire human mechanism and supporting the body's own ability to heal. Therefore, it works to keep the human body healthy by removing toxic and unwanted substances from it.

Naturopathy believes that the primary cause of any disease is the accumulation of morbid matters in the body. Bacteria and viruses get into the human body only when the body accumulates morbid matters. Naturopathy believes that the chronic diseases are the result of incorrect treatment and suppression of the acute disease. The human body possesses the power to protect itself from diseases and revive it. Therefore, in the process of cure, the entire human body is targeted to heal the disease. In Naturopathy treatment, the suppressed diseases are brought to the surface and are eliminated permanently.

Naturopathy embraces several therapies which include herbs, massage, exercise, and diet/nutritional counselling. Some more popular therapies which fall under Naturopathy are Mud Therapy, Manipulative Therapy, Electrotherapy, Acupuncture, Hydrotherapy, Chemotherapy, Physiotherapy, Exercise, Yoga Therapy, and Magnetic Therapy. Here we are mentioning the main treatment methods used in Naturopathy.

Diet Therapy

In Naturopathy, food is generally classified according to its nature as acidic or alkaline. Thus, diet therapy greatly affects the movement and function of various parts of the body and the entire digestive system. There are mainly three types of diet under this therapy:

a) Elimination Diet: This diet focuses on cleansing the body. The food ingredients that help rejuvenate the human body fall into this category. It usually comes first in diet therapy. To cleanse the entire system, you need to lay the foundation of health in the beginning. This diet includes food like lemonade, citric juice, green tea etc.

b) Soothing Diet: Another way to detoxify the body is through a soothing diet. This diet is specially designed to make the human body accustomed to non-toxic food behaviour so that the body can start digesting solid food better. This diet therapy includes food like boiled vegetables, vegetable soup, salad etc.

c) Constructive diet: Constructive diet is the third and final method of diet therapy in which the human body starts functioning optimally. In this phase, the body is given whole wheat and carbohydrates. The therapy includes food like sprouted grains, pulses, unpolished rice etc.

Fasting Therapy

Naturopathy is a systematic way of healing which believes that the root cause of most of diseases is the accumulation of toxic matter in the digestive system. Fasting has been regarded as one of the prominent techniques of Naturopathy. It promotes the idea of natural healing without consuming any chemicals. In Naturopathy, fasting is performed to enable nature to start its cleaning process in the body and cut down the additional load to digest food. Fasting therapy accentuates the idea of giving rest to the digestive system to regain the health and freshness of the body. This therapy gives digestive organs ample time to restore its efficiency which has been distorted with toxic eating habits. As unhealthy food choices tend to weaken our immune system, fasting therapy is one such natural phenomenon that detoxifies the body to augment immunity, physical, psychological, and sensory wellness in the long run.

The duration of fasting therapy depends upon the age of the patient, condition of the disease, and the amount and type of drug used before. Under fasting therapy, patients are advised to observe a series of short fasts of two or three days and gradually increase the duration of fast with each succeeding day. It is also a mere fact that prolonged fasting should be performed under the supervision of a specialized naturopath to ensure that no harm will accrue to fasting patients.

Mud Therapy

Earth is made up of various minerals and compounds that play an important role in boosting the body's immunity level. Clay is one such element of earth which has been linked with many religious beliefs due to its healing properties. In Naturopathy, Mud Therapy involves the scientific use of moistened earth in a proper manner to benefit the body from within. Mud possesses the quality of absorbing toxins from the body which eventually helps in the prevention of many diseases.

The application of mud over the body causes cooling and helps to retain the moisture. The shape and consistency of the mud can be changed easily by adding water. Mud therapy is easily available and is an affordable procedure. It has the property of absorbing all the colours from the sun and conveys them to the body.

In the Mud Bath therapy, mud is applied to the patient in a sitting or lying position. It involves the application of minerals rich mud and natural salts over the body. In this therapy, thorough care must be taken to ensure that the patient is safe from catching a cold during bath. Thorough washing of the patient with cold water jet spray is followed after the bath. In case a patient is feeling cold, warm water can be used. Afterwards, the patient must be taken to a warm bed to avoid sickness. It should be noted that the duration of a mud bath should be 45 to 60 minutes.

By educating about the root cause of health issues, Naturopathy aims to educate the people about healthy changes they can adopt in their lifestyle in order to get well. From advising on dietary and lifestyle changes to guiding you towards achieving emotional wellbeing; Naturopathy holds a prominent place in the world of medicine. If we take a broader glance at today's scenario, Naturopathy is widely known for its advantages and hugely applauded for its various modes of therapies. It has been accepted as an independent system of medicine.

Naturopathy is an ancient and rational system of healing that utilises natural elements based on the theory of self-healing capacity of the body, vitality, and detoxification. By adopting this natural method, we can stay healthy for a long time by avoiding the side effects of toxic chemicals.

PM-KUSUM: Transforming India's Energy Landscape

Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi, in the 94th edition of 'Mann ki Baat', mentioned Modhera which has become the country's first Solar Village. Most of the houses in Modhera Surya Gram have started generating electricity from solar power. He also talked in length about how climate change is affecting the planet and how solar energy can pave the way for a brighter future in a world of depleting resources.

The Government of India has taken various policy measures to fulfill its commitment to have 40% of installed power generation capacity from non-fossil fuel sources by the year 2030. India made the commitment at the Paris Climate Agreement 2015. Striving to generate power from sustainable sources has led the country to rely increasingly on solar energy to meet its power needs. So, to provide energy and water security to farmers and enhance their income, de-dieselise the farm sector, and reduce environmental pollution, the Government of India approved PM-KUSUM (Pradhan Mantri Kisan Urja Suraksha evam Utthan Mahabhayan) in February 2019.

PM-KUSUM scheme comprises three components:

Component A: Addition of 10,000 MW of solar capacity through installation of small solar power plants of capacity upto 2 MW.

Component B: Installation of 20 lakh standalone solar powered agricultural pumps.

Component C: Solarisation of 15 lakh existing grid-connected agriculture pumps.

PM-KUSUM scheme is one of largest initiatives of the world to provide clean energy to more than 35 lakhs farmers by solarising their agriculture pump. The scheme also has direct employment generation potential.

Harvesting Solar Energy

Component A: Decentralised Grid Connected Solar Power Plants

This component provides for renewable energy-based power plants (REPP) of capacity 500 kW to 2 MW will be setup by individual farmers/ group of farmers/ cooperatives/ panchayats/ Farmer Producer Organisations (FPO)/Water User associations (WUA) on barren/fallow land. These power plants can also be installed on cultivable land on stilts where crops can also be grown below the solar panels. The renewable energy power project will be installed within five km radius of the sub-stations in order to avoid high cost of sub-transmission lines and to reduce transmission losses. The scheme opens a stable and continuous source of income to the rural landowners for 25 years.

The Central Government provides an incentive of 40 paise/KWH or Rs. 6.60 lakhs/MW/year, whichever is lower to the DISCOMs, for buying the power produced under this Component for a period of five years from the Commercial Operation Date of the plant.

De-dieselisation of Farm Sector

Component-B: Installation of Standalone Solar Powered Agriculture Pumps

Under this component, individual farmers can replace their existing diesel pumps with

EN EXPLAINS

Individual farmers will be supported to install standalone solar Agriculture pumps of capacity up to 7.5 HP (15 HP during the extended scheme tenure). Installation of Universal Solar Pump Controller (USPC) is permitted under this Component. A USPC enables the farmer to where there is no source of electric power for irrigation. It will also help in increasing the farmer's income and living conditions.

Under the scheme, Central Financial Assistance (CFA) upto 30% of the benchmark cost of the standalone solar pump will be provided. The State Government will give a subsidy of 30%; and the remaining 40% will be provided by the farmer. However, in North Eastern States, Sikkim, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Jammu & Kashmir, Ladakh, Lakshadweep and A&N Islands, higher CFA upto 50% of the benchmark cost of the standalone solar pump will be provided.

Solarisation of Agriculture Feeders

Solarisation of agriculture feeders has been included as a variant under Component-C of PM-KUSUM Scheme. Under this component, individual farmers having grid connected agriculture pump will be supported to solarise pumps. The farmer will be able to use the generated solar power to meet the irrigation needs. Government of India will provide 30% subsidy for solarisation of agricultural feeders. This will lower the cost of capital and cost of power. The farmers will get day-time reliable power for irrigation free of cost or at tariff fixed by their respective state.

The DISCOMs (distribution companies) shall incentivise farmers for consuming power less than benchmark consumption. Such saving of power shall be treated as surplus power injected by farmers and they will be paid by DISCOMs against this saved power at pre-determined tariff.

Expected outcomes

PM-KUSUM will bring along the following reform/improvements:

- Day-time reliable power for irrigation: Farmers typically get power for irrigation at night. This not only causes them a great deal of inconvenience but also results in wastage of water as pumps are left running once switched on. Providing solar panels for irrigation under PM-KUSUM would result in day-time reliable power to farmers making irrigation easier for them and also avoiding over-use of water and power.
- De-Dieselization of Farm Sector: Farmers have been demanding replacement of diesel pumps with electric pumps as the former one is costly to run. By replacing diesel pumps with solar pumps and panels, the farmers will get cheaper and more reliable power for irrigation resulting savings in diesel cost.
- Enhancing Farmers' Income: PM-KUSUM will replace high cost diesel with less expensive solar energy under and by enabling farmers to sell surplus solar power at a pre-determined rate to DISCOMs, this scheme will help the farmers earn better.
- Curbing Climate Change: The total diesel consumption of the agricultural pumps installed in India in a year works out to 5.52 billion litre per annum along with equivalent CO₂ emission of 15.4 million tonnes. When implemented fully, PM-KUSUM will lead to reducing carbon emissions by as much as 32 million tonnes of CO₂ per annum.
- Boosting Domestic Solar Manufacturing: India aims to achieve 100 GW of solar power capacity by the year 2022. However, our domestic solar manufacturing capacity is limited, and we mostly depend on imports in this area. Under PM-KUSUM, it is a mandatory requirement for deploying domestically produced solar cells and modules. This will create demand of 20.8 GW for domestically produced solar cells and modules boosting the domestic solar manufacturing.
- Reducing the Import Bill: PM-KUSUM will lead to an annual reduction in diesel consumption thus reducing the import bill on account of petroleum products. Moreover, enhanced domestic solar manufacturing will lead to a further reduction in the outgo on account of imports.

extreme heat stress, desertification, urban flooding, and forest fires.

India, like the majority of nations, would fall short of the IPCC guidelines despite its efforts to combat climate change unless its policies abandon all other development objectives in favor of combating climate change. However, the IPCC report and regional studies from the nation both show that India is already in a vulnerable position. States like Assam, Andhra Pradesh, Maharashtra, Karnataka, and Bihar are among those that are most susceptible to climatic hazards including floods, droughts, and cyclones.

There are a few gaps in our strategy in the existing adaptation plans that must be addressed. Many of these plans are inadequate, dispersed, unstructured, and unevenly distributed among areas. Due to the interconnectedness of an ecosystem's functioning and the human societies that surround it, this may render climate mitigation initiatives ineffective. One could get temporary fixes but not lasting long-term ones if the other is not addressed. Plans for sustainable adaptation that can be put into action to reduce adaptation gaps must have sufficient funding. All parties involved in the process, both public and private, must invest and create a budget plan for adaptation measures. The solution to the problems that climate change poses for India is a long-term sustainable action plan, effective governance, and money, keeping in mind the challenges faced by developing countries. Even though existing methods are functional, adaptation is necessary, but disadvantaged communities need greater assistance.

India's Mitigation Initiatives

- In 2015, the Prime Minister had announced a target of 175 GW installed Renewable Energy (RE) capacity to be achieved by the year 2022. By 2021 end, India had crossed the 100 GW milestone (excluding large hydro). The government believes that India has tapped only a fraction of the vast potential for renewable energy and has, therefore, raised the target to 450 GW RE installed capacity by 2030.
- An additional 3 million hectares of forest have been added over the past ten years, bringing the total amount of forest to approximately one-fourth of the nation's land area.
- India is on a target to fulfil its pledge to neutralise land degradation at the national level. By 2030, it hopes to have 26 million hectares of damaged land restored. In doing so, India will fulfil its promise to create an additional carbon sink of 2.5 to 3 billion tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalent.

- The National Hydrogen Mission seeks to make India a Green Hydrogen centre and assist the government in achieving its climate goals. By 2030, 5 million tonnes of Green Hydrogen should be produced, and this will aid in the expansion of renewable energy capacity.
- The second phase of FAME India (Faster Adoption and Manufacturing of Hybrid & Electric Vehicles in India) was launched in 2019. The first phase of the scheme was launched in 2015 on a pan-India basis with the goal of promoting the production and use of electric and battery-run eco-friendly vehicles in the nation. The policy's goals are to decrease the number of old and defective vehicles on the road, reduce vehicular air pollution in order to meet India's climate change commitments, improve road and vehicle safety, increase fuel efficiency, formalise the current unregulated vehicle scrapping business, and increase the supply of affordable raw materials for the automotive, steel, and electronics industries.
- The government also aims to achieve 100% electrification of Indian Railways by 2024/Net Zero by 2030.
- The target year for blending 20% ethanol in petrol has been advanced to 2025. The Government of India has been supporting the Ethanol Blended Petrol (EBP) Program to enhance India's energy security, reduce import dependency on fuel, save foreign exchange, address environmental challenges, and boost the domestic agriculture sector. The government's "National Policy on Biofuels," announced in 2018, outlined the importance of the potential target of blending 20% ethanol into petrol by 2030. Due to the positive results of the government's various interventions since 2014, the objective of blending 20% ethanol was advanced from 2030 to 2025-2026. Ethanol blending will not only reduce environmental degradation but also boost the income of sugarcane farmers. The government has been advocating the conversion of surplus sugarcane and sugar into ethanol for supply to Oil Marketing Companies for blending with fuel as a long-term option to cope with surplus sugar, to promote the sustainability of the sugar sector, and to guarantee immediate payment of cane dues to farmers. This will boost the revenue of sugarcane farmers in addition to reducing import dependence on crude oil and promoting ethanol as an indigenous, non-polluting fuel.

There are numerous other initiatives being undertaken to carry out the "Panchamrit" aims as envisaged by Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi, including electrification using renewable energy sources, steps to improve energy efficiency, energy storage, clean mobility, PLI (Production Linked Incentive) schemes on ACC battery storage, and high-efficiency PV (photovoltaic) cell production, as well as National Green Hydrogen Mission, organic farming, and circular economy.

The Need for Adaptation

At least 170 nations now include adaptation in their climate strategies, although many have not yet moved from strategy to implementation. The IPCC concludes that existing efforts are still primarily gradual, reactive, and small-scale, with the majority concentrating exclusively on immediate impacts or hazards. There is still a gap between present and necessary levels of adaptation, which is largely due to the lack of available funding. The IPCC predicts that by 2030 and 2050, respectively, developing nations alone will have adaptation needs totaling $127 billion and $295 billion annually. Barely 4-8% of tracked climate financing, which totaled $579 billion in 2017-18, is being allocated to adaptation. To achieve the COP26 targets (United Nations Climate Change Conference 2021), the government is also working towards creating sustainable finance and having a green taxonomy.

Adaptation Based on Ecosystems

This strategy includes a wide range of tactics, including the preservation, restoration, and sustainable management of ecosystems as well as more environmentally friendly agriculture techniques including adding trees to farms, diversifying the types of crops grown there, and planting trees in pastures. With co-benefits for biodiversity, livelihoods, health, food security, and carbon sequestration, ecosystem-based adaptation might lessen the climatic hazards that many people already suffer, such as droughts, intense heat waves, floods, and fires. These policies must be developed in meaningful cooperation with indigenous people and local communities, and they must take into account how future global warming will affect ecosystems.

New Technologies and Infrastructure

New research indicates that combining manmade choices like flood control channels with naturally occurring solutions could help lower dangers associated with water and the shoreline, especially in urban areas. Access to more advanced technology, such as more resilient animal breeds, solar and wind power, or more resilient agricultural kinds, can also aid boost resilience. However, some of these climate adaptation strategies may be hazardous if they are done incorrectly or with an inadequate design. For instance, expanding irrigation systems can reduce short-term climate risks but can also deplete already limited groundwater supplies.

The impacts of climate change on various societal segments are interconnected. Food production and human health can be hampered by drought. In addition to harming ecosystems and infrastructure, flooding can spread illness. Health issues can reduce worker productivity, and increase mortality, while also having an impact on the availability of food. Every part of the world we live in is affected by climate change. However, the effects of climate change are not uniform throughout the nation and the world; even within a single city, different regions or people may experience different effects.

Future scenarios that are predicted as an impact of climate change are not unavoidable. We already know a lot of the issues and potential fixes, and as we continue to study climate change, new hazards keep surfacing. By lowering warming and bringing emissions as close to zero as feasible, experts believe there is still time to prevent the worst-case scenario. It will be necessary to invest in new infrastructure and technology to reduce our emissions of greenhouse gases, which will generate jobs. Additionally, reducing emissions can minimize negative effects on human health, saving countless lives and the amount spent on medical treatment.

Conclusion

Global warming threatens both human and environmental health. Delaying action increases the likelihood that climate change will have disastrous effects on our planet, rendering it unrecognizable. A little window of opportunity to realize a sustainable, livable future for everyone exists in the coming years. To change course, immediate, bold, and coordinated measures must be made to reduce emissions, foster resilience, protect ecosystems, and vastly increase funding for adaptation and mitigating loss and damage.

The 27th Conference of the Parties on Climate Change (COP27), a pivotal event in the fight against climate change, was held from 6th to 18th November 2022 in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt. The 198 convention members gathered for the yearly summit to collaborate against the negative impacts of climate change. The world is not on track to limit global warming to 1.5 C, and events in the past year have made the road to achievement even more challenging. The continuation of international climate cooperation depends on the success of resolutions and decisions made during the COP27. Much will rest on the willingness of development countries to assist underdeveloped nations in dealing with the loss and damage brought on by climate change. Building on the results of COP26, COP27 brings action on a number of areas crucial to addressing the climate emergency; including decreasing greenhouse gas emissions urgently, fostering resilience, preparing for climate change's unavoidable effects, and fulfilling obligations to finance climate action in developing nations. At COP27, nations are urged to work together once more to fulfill the historic Paris Agreement for people and the environment in the face of a worsening energy crisis, record greenhouse gas concentrations, and an increase in extreme weather catastrophes.

Building a compelling national narrative about climate change based on what India can do and what India needs is once again in the limelight as COP27 concludes. India's needs have been estimated by a number of different sources, with estimates ranging from $1 trillion to be invested over the next ten years to $10 trillion needed to achieve net zero by 2070. The majority of energy economy models concentrate on technological approaches to reducing emissions, making suggestions for renewable energy, hydrogen, carbon capture, demand management, etc. They lack the expertise to offer commentary on the political or behavioral aspects of putting these solutions into practice, such as the employment distributional effects of phase-out of coal, managing just transitions, coping with resource limitations, or even investigating whether alternate solutions trends of urbanization or economic growth are feasible. We require a more thorough and thoughtful approach to modeling. Studies should concentrate on the socioeconomic growth patterns, the management of the energy transition, predicted emissions, investment requirements, the study's approach to social fairness, the effects on the environment, and what it means for India's energy security. The two vital areas where the commitments made under the Paris Agreement have not been fulfilled are nevertheless climate finance and technology transfer. Additionally, equal attention to adaptation is a top priority for a developing nation like India because a significant part of the population is vulnerable to the growing hazards of climate change and natural disasters.

Polish Your Personality for Virtual ...

discussion round is a crucial one, because this round will decide whether you proceed to the personal interview round or not; this is a round that you will have to face in order to get one step closer to realizing your aspiration of further education or a dream job.

Although, at times you may freeze at the mere thought of how you will present your thoughts and views in a group discussion, in reality, the group discussion round is not as fearful as it seems if you work hard to master the tried and tested ways that can help you sail through a GD.

You first need to understand why the GD round is being conducted and why is it so essential. The GD round helps a panel analyse and understand every candidate with respect to their requirement. Your level of confidence, team skills, communication, leadership skills, the respect you carry for people, your knowledge level and the list goes on.

1. Audience Analysis Matters

The most crucial aspect of your preparation is- 'understand your audience', understand an interviewer's perspective, understand what they want to see in a candidate, understand the purpose of the GD round.

2. Content Matters

A well-read and well-informed candidate is what the panellists look for. Hence you need a thorough background in current affairs relating to politics, social scenarios, and social issues. Thus, all those who have been avid readers of newspapers and magazines, undoubtedly, stand a better chance in making an impression.

Panellists value a candidate who can present an in-depth analysis and support their points with research, facts and figures in the GD Round.

A group discussion gives you just 20 minutes to prove your worth in a group of 8-10 candidates. This is not a trivial task. This is even more difficult in a virtual GD. How you enter into a discussion, how you begin, how you present your thoughts and view points matters.

The GDs can be broadly classified into three categories: Factual topics or general topics that assess your general awareness, Abstract topics that assess your creative thought process, and Case-based topics that assess your problem solving and decision making ability. Try to solve multiple case studies to enhance your problem-solving skills and creative or out of the box thinking.

So, go ahead, read as much as you can, build your own repertoire of knowledge so that you do not lack content. You need to begin by keeping track of what is happening across the globe. Your knowledge, your level of content remotely shows a well-rounded personality.

3. Communication Skills Matter

Next crucial aspect is your communication skills. You will need to have a decent command over English. You should have a good vocabulary as well so that you don't find yourself fumbling with words.

Practice speaking in groups, have mock GDs with friends and video record these to review your performance later. This will not only help you increase your knowledge but will also improve your fluency and of course, your confidence.

4. Non-Verbal Skills Matter

Recruiters observe you, listen to what you say and also listen to what you don't say. Your gestures, posture, facial expressions, and paralanguage speak more than your words at times. Since the GD is virtual, your face is even more being observed, control your expressions.

5. Listening Skills Matter

In a GD, it is very important to speak but equally important is to be a good listener. Showcase your respect for other speakers by listening well and not interrupting all the time. However, time is limited in a GD, hence don't let everybody else eat into your time. Take or grab the opportunity to enter into the discussion but with valid points.

6. Initiating and Summarizing the GD

Take the opportunity to initiate the discussion if you know the topic well. Similarly, if you are a good listener, then take the opportunity to summarize the discussion. Do enter into the discussion whenever you feel you have a valid point to present. Try not using phrases like, 'I agree', 'I don't agree', 'Adding to', because you are there to present your views and not to agree, disagree or add to what others are saying.

Now moving on to the Personal Interview Round

You have reached the PI round, that means you have sailed through the GD round. Now it is only you and the recruiters.

The preparation for the PI doesn't begin after you clear a GD, but much before. Now is the time to prove your worth, show them that you will be an asset to the organization. What you can bring to the table that the other candidates may not, is important. Your enthusiasm, your energy, your positivity, your knowledge and of course yourself and your smile, everything matters.

First of all, the audience analysis in a detailed manner as follows:

7. Homework Matters

Know the Sector: Read about the sector you are applying to, know the major players in the sector, understand their strengths, understand how business is happening.

Know the Organization: Read about the organization, read about the business verticals the organization is into, learn about its products and services, in fact everything you can.

Know the Profile: Understand the profile, understand how you match with the expectations of the profile.

You can prove your worth when you are able to relate well and tell the recruiters how you are the most appropriate candidate.

8. Anticipate Questions and Prepare Answers

Believe me, you can drive the interview by introducing yourself and adding aspects that you would want to be questioned on. Practice giving precise and crisp answers rather than beating around the bush. Anticipate what the panellists can ask you based on your first answer.

Important Tip is, make the most of the "Tell us something about yourself" question. This can help you to put questions into the recruiters' minds and mouth.

For example, if you say you love reading books, automatically the next question is, name a few books or your favourite author. You should be prepared.

Anticipate questions based on your Resume as well. Every single piece of information or claim that you have on your Resume is a question for you.

Just because it is a virtual PI and you are on a laptop or desktop doesn't mean that you can search answers on web during the interview. It is visible through your body language, your facial expression, and movement of your eyes that you are trying to search or use unethical means.

Keep your Resume in front of you, so that you don't forget key points you wanted to talk about.

Read the frequently asked questions and make flow charts to remember what to say and how to say; flow charts create a visual for you to remember easily.

Some important frequently asked questions in virtual interviews are:

- Tell us something about yourself
- Talk about your strengths and weaknesses
- Why do wish to work with us?
- Why should you be hired?
- Do you prefer working from office or home?
- How do you organize your day-to-day tasks while being at home?
- How do you stay motivated when working alone?
- Tell us about a challenge you took on by yourself. ...
- Are you able to avoid distractions when you're working from home?

9. Use the STAR Approach to Answer

Whenever you are asked a behavioural question, use the STAR approach to answer. This helps to structure the answer in a proper manner rather than a haphazard manner.

STAR is an acronym for Situation, Task, Action, and Result.

For example a question like 'Talk about a challenge you faced, what did you do?' Your answer should first talk about the Situation, then the Task at hand, move on to the Actions you undertook and Result achieved.

Once you start putting all your answers especially those to behavioural questions, in a structured style, you come across as a very well organized candidate.

10. Practice and Rehearse!

Practice and rehearse are two different words, do seem synonymous may be. Practice happens first to put as much as effort as you can to master a skill; Rehearsal can be done to see how you perform.

Practice with friends for both GD and PI; Rehearse and video record mock GD and PI to review and introspect how it went. Learn from your mistakes.

An important point, do not memorise your answers, practice speaking them over and over again. Add a few different words each time so that you come out looking natural in your answers and not like you learnt all answers by heart.

Also do remember that you are judged most in the first five minutes of your interview so try creating an impact with your enthusiasm, positivity, and energy, because during the rest of the interview, the interviewer would look for aspects that can help them confirm and reach a decision about your candidature.

Enter with positivity, energy, passion, and enthusiasm, exit on a similar note as well. And don't leave the room or the meeting without reiterating your appropriateness for the profile. In simple words, convince them that you are the right hire! Create that 'wow' factor.

Don't forget the 4 C's, your content, communication skills, confidence and composure that can be your weapons to ace the GD and PI. And as I always say to all, 'Carry your sunshine with you!'. You are sure to win hearts and your hard work will pay off! Remember there is no magic wand, only your persistent hard work can be the key to your success. Good Luck!

Addressing the Intensifying Impacts of ...

for India has been authorized by the Prime Minister and will be submitted to the UNFCCC (United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change). The updated NDC aims to boost India's contributions to the Paris Agreement's objective of strengthening the global response to the challenge of climate change. Such a strategy will also assist India in establishing growth routes with reduced emissions. Based on the UNFCCC's guiding policies and provisions, it would defend the interests of the nation and future development goals. The 2015 NDC included eight goals, three of which have quantitative targets for 2030, namely the creation of an additional carbon sink of 2.5 to 3 billion tons of carbon dioxide equivalent through increased forest and tree cover and the achievement of cumulative installed non-fossil power capacity to reach 40% of GDP.

According to the revised NDC, India is now committed to lowering the GDP's emissions intensity by 45 percent from 2005 levels by 2030 and generating nearly half of all installed electric power capacity from sources other than fossil fuels. The Honorable Prime Minister's vision of sustainable lifestyles and climate justice to safeguard the weak and vulnerable from the negative effects of climate change. To advance and further disseminate a healthy and sustainable way of life-based on traditions and values of conservation and moderation, especially through a mass movement for 'LiFE'-Lifestyle for Environment as a cornerstone to addressing climate change. LiFE stands for Lifestyle for Environment. LiFE's mission is to live in harmony without causing environmental damage. And individuals that adopt such a way of life are referred to as "Pro-Planet

People." Mission LiFE draws inspiration from the past, works in the present, and thinks about the future. The principles of "reduce," "use," and "recycle" are embedded in our everyday lives. In India's revised NDC, the citizen-centric approach to addressing climate change is also emphasized. India's decision to adopt increased NDCs demonstrates its commitment to fully decoupling economic growth from greenhouse gas emissions.

Question: 31st October is celebrated as Rashtriya Ekta Diwas to commemorate the birth anniversary of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel who played an important role in unifying the country. What, in your opinion, is that one factor which plays a major role in unifying the people of India, and how?

RICHA SINGH
NEW DELHI

When it comes to identifying the factor that plays the most important role in unifying the people of India, one thing that instantly comes to everyone's mind is sports. Whether it is a cricket match or any other game or sport competition of international level; Indians join their passions to cheer for the Indian team. Is it really about winning a particular game or somewhere very deep in the hearts of every Indian lies the feeling of patriotism, ambition of taking our country to the topmost level in the world? This one feeling is the bonding factor that glues every Indian citizen to the other.

We celebrate 31st October as Rashtriya Ekta Diwas to commemorate the birth anniversary of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and remember his important role in unifying the country at the time of Independence. If the feeling of oneness, of being 'Indian' made us unite at that time, why can't it lead us to the path of progress now, when we are really one, when we have lived 75 years of oneness ?

In my view, if we choose different short term goals for ourselves and see India rise at various levels on Global Platforms, it is definitely going to be the most important unifying factor for the people of India, as every Indian citizen wants to make India - a better India.

PM Modi Unveils Logo, Theme, Website, App for India's G20 Presidency

Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi, on 8th November, unveiled the logo, theme, mobile app and website of India's G20 Presidency. The logo draws inspiration from the vibrant colours of India's national flag - saffron, white and green, and blue. It juxtaposes planet Earth with the lotus, India's national flower that reflects growth amid challenges. The theme of India's G20 Presidency - "Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam" or "One Earth One Family One Future" - is drawn from the ancient Sanskrit text of the Maha Upanishad. Essentially, the theme affirms the value of all life - human, animal, plant, and micro-organisms - and their interconnectedness on the planet Earth and in the wider universe. The website of India's G20 Presidency www.g20.in will seamlessly migrate to the G20 Presidency website www.g20.org on 1 December 2022, the day India takes over the G20 Presidency. In addition to substantive information about G20 and logistics arrangements, the website would also be used to build and serve as a repository of information on G20. The website includes a section for citizens to submit their suggestions. In addition to the website, a mobile app "G20 India" has been released on both Android and iOS platforms.

Guidelines for Uplinking and Downlinking of TV Channels Revised

The Centre has revised the guidelines for uplinking and downlinking of Television channels in India. In the new guidelines, rules and procedures have been simplified to promote ease of doing business. Now, Limited Liability Partnership (LLP) entities can also seek permission for operating TV channels. Companies would be allowed to uplink foreign channels from Indian teleports which would create employment opportunities and make India a teleport hub for other countries. Furthermore, a new provision has been added to encourage TV channels to broadcast content related to public service and national interests including agriculture, women empowerment and education.
